About Weed Composting

Plants are autotrophic and synthesize food material, and important to secure the well-being of humankind. Compost is organic matter that has decomposed, from leaves and manure to weeds, wood and paper. Compost feeds soil in a slow and steady manner, allowing soil to feed plants. In gardens, a compost heap speeds up nature's process of decomposition, resulting in less slugs than from mulches of undecomposed matter, and stronger plants. Organic matter enables soil to aggregate into crumbs, for stability and aeration, and is food for soil's billions of mostly unseen inhabitants. Organic matter is carbon, and more in the soil means less in the atmosphere. Fresh manure is organic matter, so far so good, but compared to compost it contains less living organisms such as fungi, and its nutrients are more water soluble. Hence the worries over nitrate leaching from slurry (pure and fresh cow poo), which confusingly have been transferred by legislators to include compost.

Scope

Weeds are generally unuseful products for productivity though they have abundant opportunity in different ways. Weed composting is a wonderful process to utilize no use or minimum use plants to make manure to improve the fertility of the soil in turn it increases the yielding of the crops.

Topics to be covered

- Weed (BIO) composting
- Composting weeds
- How to identify safe weeds to compost?
- Common misconceptions about composting weeds
- Parthenium hysterophorus as a biocompost
- Benefits of weed composting

Aim of the Course

This certificate course has been introduced skill enhanced Course in Weed Composting which includes:

- Understand the scope & importance of Weed Composting
- Know about Weed Composting
- Study and understand about Weed Composting
- Gain knowledge about the Weed Composting process
- Study the various weeds for composting
- Study the value in Practical experience in weed composting
- Awareness programs on the importance of weed composting as fertilizer and minimizing the competition of weeds with native biodiversity

Outcome of the Course

The students will gain knowledge about the composting of weeds and aware about the importance of weed composting as fertilizer and minimize the competition of weeds with native biodiversity, which will enhance the indigenous plant diversity in the area.

Introduction

Study material:-

Weeds:- Weeds are unwanted, persistent, harmful plants that impede the growth of other crop plants and negatively impact human activities, agricultural production, natural phenomena, and national economy.

Weed compost:- Compost from weeds can be perfectly safe and full of good nutrients so they are great addition to the compost pile. Soak weeds in water for about a month and then strain. The resulting liquid can be diluted and used to safely add nutrients to beds. The best time to take care of weeds is when they are small and have not established deep roots or seed heads.

1. Biocomposting :-

Biocomposting is a aerobic bio-degradation of organic materials under controlled conditions, resulting in a rich humus like materials. A mixture of organic matters as from leaves & manure that has decayed or has been digested by organisms. used to improve soil structure and provide nutrients. It improves air circulation and water retention capacity of soil.

→ In natural systems no such thing as "waste" exists. Energy and matter captured by life processes are released upon the breakdown of organic substances only to be re-utilized by living organisms within the system. Long-term soil-fertility is maintained in natural system because the residues of biological decomposition are used by them to foster new growth.

VAAGDEVIDEGREE & P.G. COLLEGE

2. Composting weeds - the surprising benefits of turning unwanted plants into nutrient rich soil.

→ They are a nuisance in our lawns and gardens and every year, homeowners spend millions of dollars on chemicals trying to control them. For most home gardens, weeds are enemy number one, and they must be eliminated at all costs.

→ Although they tend to ruin the look and beauty of our yards and even try to choke out our precious vegetable plants if left too long, weeds provide excellent benefits for our composting needs once removed. After all they spent all that time pulling valuable nutrients out of the soil and away from our wanted plants and lawn.

Reducing greenhouse gas emissions:-

When organic matter, including weeds, decomposes in a landfill, it generates methane, a potent greenhouse gas contributing to climate change. Composting weeds instead of disposing of them in a landfill can help to reduce methane emissions.

3) How to identify safe weeds to compost:

Even when adding weeds to your compost pile or bin, there are a few precautions or steps that should be taken to ensure that all is good and that you don't accidentally do more work for yourself going forward.

- 1) Avoid weeds that have gone to seed
  - 2) Don't use weeds that are diseased or infected
- Weeds that are diseased or infested with pests should be removed and disposed of to prevent the spread of the disease or cause an infestation to other plants in your yard.

* Common misconceptions about composting weeds

→ Weeds shouldn't be composted because they will survive and regrow. While it is true that some weed seeds can survive the composting process, the chances of them regrowing are quite low, especially if the compost pile is well-managed and reaches high-temperatures.

All weeds can be composted. While most weeds can be composted, it is important to avoid adding any weeds that are invasive or noxious, as these could potentially spread to new areas if not properly composted.

5) Parthenium hysterophorus as a biocompost?

Parthenium hysterophorus It is Inhabitant in the American-tropic region. It is commonly known as "Congress weed" in India it is commonly called Carrot grass. It was introduced to India by Import food grains (Dhawan 1996). After this it has spread widely throughout India. At present Parthenium is one of the noxious weeds found in wastelands, forest, grasslands and agricultural lands in India and is spreading at a rapid rate all over India. Making compost using Parthenium hysterophorus is useful for soil composting as it contains two times more Nitrogen, Phosphorus and Potassium than Farm yard manure (FYM) even though it contains higher amount of nutrients. It improves physical Properties of soil which increase Organic matter Content and suppress soil borne disease. It can be utilized effectively as Organic manure by composting as this weed produce high biomass.

Q) Benefits of composting weeds?

→ Although they tend to ruin the look and beauty of our yards and even try to choke our precious vegetable plants if left too long, weeds provide excellent benefits for our composting needs once removed. — After all, they spent all that time pulling valuable nutrients out of the soil and away from our wanted plants and lawn.

→ There are some of the benefits of composting weeds as opposed to just throwing them into the trash or organics bin; if you:

→ Reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

When organic matter, including weeds, decomposes in a landfill, it generates methane, a potent greenhouse gas contributing to climate change. Composting weeds instead of disposing of them in a landfill can help to reduce methane emissions.

Student Feed back:

1) P. Akhila - Weed composting is a very useful and beneficial to the farmers during crop cultivation and enhancing the quality & fertility of soil.

2) K. Basareddy :- Weed composting increases organic matter of soil and enhances the NPK content in the soil and for better crop growth.
