DEPARTMENT OF FOOD SCIENCE AND QUALITYCONTROL AND DEPARTMENT OF NUTRITION AND DIETETICS

(FOOD SCIENCE AND QUALITY CONTROL DEPARTMENT)

Participative Learning

Report on Students' Seminar Lists for the Academic Year 2023-24

Introduction The Department of Food and Nutrition organized a series of student seminars during the academic year 2022-23, aligning with the Participative Learning criteria for 2023-24. These seminars aimed to actively engage students in collaborative learning, enhance their communication skills, and deepen their understanding of core topics in food and nutrition.

Objective The objective of the seminars was to foster participative learning by encouraging students to research, present, and discuss key topics in food and nutrition, thereby improving their analytical and presentation skills.

Details of the Program

- Duration: Conducted throughout the academic year 2023-24.
- Participants: Undergraduate and postgraduate students of the Department of Food and Nutrition.
- Approach: Individual and group presentations followed by interactive discussions.

Types of Topics Covered in Seminars The seminars covered a range of theoretical and practical topics, ensuring a comprehensive learning experience. Below is a list of some key topics:

Topic	Description
Innovative Food Product Development	Research and presentation on novel food formulations.
Nutritional Challenges in Public Health	Addressing malnutrition and dietary interventions.
Functional Foods and Nutraceuticals	Role of functional foods in health and disease prevention.
Food Safety and Quality Management	Standards and practices to ensure food safety.
Diet Therapy and Clinical Nutrition	Case studies and practical approaches to dietary management.
Sustainable Food Practices	Promoting eco-friendly and sustainable dietary habits.
Emerging Trends in Food Science	Discussion on advancements in food technology and nutrition.

Impact of the Seminars

- Enhanced understanding of critical topics in food and nutrition.
- Development of research, critical thinking, and problem-solving skills.
- Improved confidence and proficiency in public speaking and teamwork.
- Active engagement and knowledge sharing among students.

Conclusion The students' seminars conducted during the academic year 2022-23 were a valuable component of participative learning. They provided students with an opportunity to actively engage with their peers, faculty, and the subject matter, fostering a collaborative and enriching academic environment. The Department of Food and Nutrition plans to continue organizing such initiatives to support holistic student development.
